RIVER ADVENTURES

Ocoee River

Cleveland/Bradley Chamber of Commerce
225 Keith St SW • 423-472-6587
VisitClevelandTN.com

Located in the Cherokee National Forest in neighboring Polk County, the Ocoee River offers various skill levels of kayaking, canoeing and whitewater rafting. The Ocoee River's Class III and IV rapids make it the most popular whitewater river in the nation and site of the 1996 Olympic whitewater events. To book a rafting trip on America's Olympic River, contact a Chamber-member outfitter listed on page 12 or search for outfitters on our website.

Centennial Olympic Bridge

Highway 64 W, Copperhill
423-496-5197 • 1-877-692-6050
fs.usda.gov/cherokee

Nestled in the mountains of the Cherokee National Forest, the commemorative bridge is a great starting point to hike the trail system, mountain bike, and enjoy the river. The Ocoee was the site of the 1996 Olympic Slalom Canoe/Kayak Competition. Day use parking and special events may require a fee.

Hiwassee River

Cleveland/Bradley Chamber of Commerce
225 Keith St SW • 423-472-6587
VisitClevelandTN.com
HiwasseeBlueway.com

The Hiwassee River is the first designated State Scenic River in Tennessee. The river offers a wide variety of outdoor recreational opportunities as it flows through four Tennessee counties – Polk, McMinn, Bradley and Meigs – before merging with the Tennessee River. Enjoy canoeing, fishing, hiking and nature photography in the northeastern section and skiing, boating and paddling in Charleston (North Bradley County). Numerous public access sites provide boat-launching ramps. Picnic areas, sanitary facilities and primitive camping are also available.

Hiwassee/Ocoee Scenic River State Park

423-263-0050 • TNStateParks.com/parks/about/Hiwassee-Ocoee

This Tennessee State Park offers rafting, tubing, fishing, biking, camping, picnicking and hiking. Nationally-recognized whitewater sites, the Ocoee and Hiwassee rivers, are known for their scenic beauty and recreational adventures. A portion of the John Muir State Scenic Trail crosses the park. A section of the Hiwassee offers trophy-sized trout. Visit the website for park details.

Hiwassee Wildlife Refuge - Sandhill Crane Viewing

TNWatchableWildlife.org

During winter migration, thousands of sandhill cranes make the Hiwassee River area their feeding grounds from November – February. Tennessee Wildlife Resource Agency maintains a viewing area where visitors can see the birds as well as hear the symphony of their unique calls. Bring binoculars for optimal viewing of cranes and other wildlife. A festival celebrates this migration each year in January.

Tennessee River

Cleveland/Bradley Chamber of Commerce
225 Keith St SW • 423-472-6587
VisitClevelandTN.com

The Tennessee River is formed at the confluence of the Holston and French Broad rivers just east of Knoxville. The largest tributary of the Ohio River, it meets the Hiwassee near Bradley County. Great for boating, fishing, water sports and viewing wildlife, the Tennessee has been referred to as the Cherokee River, but the Cherokee called it "Tanasi," which is the origin of our state name.

Conasauga River

Conasauga River Alliance
706-695-3950 • ConasaugaRiver.org

This river begins high in the Blue Ridge Mountains in North Georgia and descends rapidly north into Tennessee. The Conasauga is a great place for swimming, fishing, hunting, snorkeling and boating. It is the habitat for over 90 species of fish and 25 species of freshwater mussels.

MOUNTAIN ADVENTURES

Cherokee National Forest USDA Forest Service

2800 Ocoee St • 423-476-9700
fs.usda.gov/cherokee

With 625,000 acres of unspoiled natural beauty, the Cherokee National Forest offers exciting and relaxing recreational opportunities. Activities enjoyed by millions each year are camping, hiking, picnicking, hunting, fishing, swimming and boating on Parksville Lake. The forest's Ocoee Scenic Byway, the first scenic byway designated in the nation, winds along Parksville Lake and the Ocoee River. Mountaintops overlooking the Chilhowee recreational area offer breathtaking scenes. In autumn, the Cherokee National Forest is ablaze with color. Late October and early November are usually the best times for seeing nature's beauty pageant at its pinnacle. Colors peak first at the higher elevations, then slide down the mountains into the river valleys. For color predictions, contact the Cherokee National Forest Fall Color Hotline at 1-800-204-6366. Parking fees in some areas.

Passport to Explore Cherokee Heritage

Cleveland/Bradley Chamber of Commerce
225 Keith St SW, 423-472-6587
VisitClevelandTN.com

Travel back in time with this tour of historic sites in Charleston, Calhoun and Cleveland, Tennessee. Research is ongoing and historical accounts are currently being discovered in this area. Present-day Charleston, was once the location of the federal Cherokee Indian Agency (1820-1833), providing protection for the Cherokee people. In prior years (1785 – 1820) and in previous locations, the Agency was responsible for issuing passports for visitors to enter the Cherokee Nation. The idea of a passport emphasizes that this was a separate nation from the United States of America. Red Clay in southern Bradley County was the last eastern council grounds of the Cherokee Nation. For detailed descriptions of all researched sites in the area, pick up your Passport to Cherokee Heritage at the Cleveland/Bradley Chamber of Commerce. Following is a sampling of sites you will find detailed in the Passport brochure.

BRADLEY COUNTY

Fort Cass (non-extant)

Fort Cass was the military headquarters for the entire 1838 Cherokee Removal, now known as the Trail of Tears. It was a collection of many encampments covering approximately 30 square miles, which included present-day Charleston and stretched toward Cleveland. Under the command of Gen. Winfield Scott, it was the one of three major federal emigration depots where Native Americans, mostly Cherokee, were assembled and held under supervision of federal troops. Rattlesnake Springs (NR Listed 1975) was one of the encampments within Fort Cass and is the most recognizable name associated with this area. The springs are located off Dry Valley Road on a privately-owned farm operated by the Moore family since 1850. Learn more about this historic area at the Hiwassee River Heritage Center.

Henegar House

428 Market St, Charleston
(private residence; view from street)

Henry B. Henegar served as wagonmaster and secretary under Chief John Ross and accompanied the Cherokee on their removal west. Henegar returned to Charleston and constructed his brick, Federal Style home circa 1849. The home was constructed on the military barracks site at Fort Cass. During the Civil War, the home (NR Listed 1976) was used as headquarters for Union and Confederate generals.

Hiwassee River Heritage Center

8746 Hiwassee St, Charleston
423-665-3373
HiwasseeHeritage.com

Present-day Charleston was once the site of the Indian Agency and eventually Ft. Cass, the military headquarters for the entire Cherokee Trail of Tears operation. Discover this important story and more at this National Park Service Certified Trail of Tears Interpretive Site.

National Historic Trail of Tears Tribute

8746 Hiwassee St (Hwy 11), Charleston

This first segment of the trail connects the Hiwassee River Heritage Center to the Charleston Park. The trail concept was designed by the National Park Service and is intended to be completed in phases eventually connecting the Hiwassee River Heritage Center to the Hiwassee River. This segment of the trail is called "Voices from the Past" and features significant quotes about the Cherokee Removal at Fort Cass from Cherokee people and missionaries on the east side of the trail and U.S. military and political figures on the west side. The trail sets the stage for learning more about the Trail of Tears and bringing the struggle of that time to a personal level.

Lewis Ross Homesite/ Barrett Hotel

373 Market St, Charleston
(private residence; view from street)

A home was built on this site in 1820 by Lewis and Frances Holt Ross. Lewis, brother of Chief John Ross, was a successful businessman. This was one of several homes and structures built and owned by Lewis Ross in the Agency area. After the Removal, the house was owned by S.S. Barrett and served as a hotel for weary travelers. Fires in the 1880s and many house alterations have significantly changed the original appearance of the home.

Cherokee Chieftain – Trail of the Whispering Giants

Museum Center at 5ive Points
200 Inman St E, Downtown Cleveland

The Cherokee Chieftain, carved by widely acclaimed sculptor Peter "Wolf" Toth, was presented to the city of Cleveland as a gift in 1974. The Chieftain stands majestically on the front lawn of the Museum Center at 5ive Points as a reminder of the region's significant Cherokee Indian heritage. Toth carved at least one statue in each of the 50 states. These works are collectively known as the Trail of the Whispering Giants.

Hair Conrad Cabin

433 Blythewood Rd SW, Cleveland
(shown by appointment, 423-476-8942)

Cherokee leader, Hair Conrad, constructed his single-pen log dwelling circa 1804. Adopting Euroamerican building practices, Conrad also assimilated with Euroamerican culture. He served as a delegate to the Cherokee Constitutional Convention in 1827 and the National Committee of the Cherokee Nation in 1836. In 1838, Hair Conrad led one of the first detachments of Cherokee to Oklahoma. The cabin is on the National Register of Historic Places and is located on the 350-acre Blythewood Farms.

Red Clay State Historic Area

1140 Red Clay Park Rd, Cleveland
423-478-0339
TNStateParks.com/parks/about/red-clay
Open March-November, 8 am-sunset;
December-February, 8 am-4:30 pm;
closed December 22-January 1.

Red Clay is the last eastern council grounds of the Cherokee Nation from 1832-1837. At Red Clay Council Grounds (NR Listed 1972), a proposed removal treaty with the United States in October 1835 was unanimously rejected by the Cherokee. Red Clay is a certified interpretive site on the Trail of Tears. A Cherokee farm and council house have been replicated to offer a glimpse of how the area might have looked 185 years ago. The sacred council spring produces over 400,000 gallons of sapphire-blue water a day. An interpretative center houses a theater, exhibits and artifacts. Recreational facilities include a 500-seat amphitheater, a picnic pavilion, picnic area with grills and tables, and a two-mile loop trail with a limestone overlook tower. Limited handicap accessibility. Take Blue Springs Road or Dalton Pike off Hwy. 64 Bypass and follow signs.

John Ross Farm

Red Hill Valley Rd, Cleveland

The last homeplace of Principal Chief John Ross east of the Mississippi River was a large farm located in the Flint Springs Community. Ross and his family lived here until removal to present-day Oklahoma. Identified by a metal DAR marker, the farm is only four miles from Red Clay Council Grounds and less than a half mile from where the Red Clay Mission was located.

John "Jack" Walker, Jr. Homeplace

US 11 and Paul Huff Pkwy, Cleveland

John "Jack" Walker, Jr. was the son of Major John Walker, a veteran who fought with Andrew Jackson at the battle of Horseshoe Bend and the grandson of Nancy Ward. His two wives were Nancy Bushyhead who lived with her brother Rev. Jesse Bushyhead, and Emily Stanfield Meigs Walker, the granddaughter of Indian Agent Return J. Meigs. His two-story log house was located near the intersection of Hwy 11 and Paul Huff Parkway. A historical marker designating the location of the home is located near Hwy 11.

Emily Meigs Walker Gravesite

Fort Hill Cemetery, Worth St, Cleveland

Emily Stanfield Meigs Walker was born on Oct. 25, 1808 to Timothy and Elizabeth Meigs. Timothy Meigs was the son of Return Jonathan Meigs, Indian Agent to the Cherokee and Revolutionary War hero. She and husband John "Jack" Walker, Jr. lived in the Amohee district (present-day northern Bradley County) of the Cherokee Nation. The marriage ended in tragedy with the murder of Jack by James Forman in August 1834. According to her grave stone, Emily died at the age of 82.

McMINN COUNTY

Gov. Joseph McMinn Grave

North Main St, Calhoun

Former Governor Joseph McMinn is buried at Shiloh Presbyterian Cemetery where a Cherokee Mission was located. After serving as Tennessee Governor from 1815 - 1821, McMinn served as Indian Agent at the Cherokee Agency from 1823 until he died at his desk in 1824.

Sarah Elizabeth Ross Grave

820 Hwy 163, Calhoun

The daughter of Lewis and Frances Ross is buried at Calhoun Methodist Church in Calhoun. She fell ill and died at age 2.

MEIGS COUNTY

Cherokee Removal Memorial Park

6800 Blythe Ferry Ln, Birchwood

This beautiful memorial park, complete with a boardwalk, overlook shelter on top of the bluff and a visitors center remembers one of the worst acts of "man's inhumanity to man." In 1838, 9,000 Cherokee and Creek camped here while waiting to cross the Tennessee River on their forced removal, now known as the "Trail of Tears." Near the Hiwassee Wildlife Refuge, the park features grand views of the Tennessee River.

POLK COUNTY

Nancy Ward Grave

Highway 411, Benton

At 17, Nancy Ward earned the name of Ghighau or "Beloved Woman" for rallying Cherokee warriors to victory after her husband died in battle. This act of bravery catapulted Ward onto the Women's Council and the Council of Chiefs. Her high standing among her people, her remarriage in the 1750s to English trader Bryant Ward, and her desire for peaceful coexistence made Ward a trusted liaison to newly arriving white settlers. In 1923, the Nancy Ward Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution erected a monument on her grave.

CULTURAL TRADITIONS REMAIN

Cherokee customs and traditions live today through storytelling, music, language schools, historic site preservation, festivals and events, and most important, Cherokee people.

"To take and hold the railroad at or east of Cleveland, Tennessee, I think is as fully as important as the taking and holding of Richmond."
- Abraham Lincoln, 30 June 1862

The Grand Army of the Republic monument at Fort Hill Cemetery is one of only three in Tennessee.

Bradley was a county divided. Neighbors, found themselves on opposite sides of the Civil War.

Civil War Trails
CivilWarTrails.org

Tennessee is part of the Civil War Trails program. The quote above, inscribed on one of our local markers, shows the significance of the area during the Civil War. Local residents housed major officials from both union and confederate camps. These stories passed down through the generations are woven throughout the Civil War Trails program. More than 1,000 interpretive markers are in place at Civil War sites in Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina and West Virginia. Tennessee, second only to Virginia in the number of significant Civil War sites, is the only state designated as a Civil War Heritage Area in its entirety. The markers in Bradley County are located at the following sites.

- Charleston City Park
Between Worth, Wool and Market streets
- Henegar House
428 Market St, Charleston
- Museum Center at 5ive Points
200 East Inman St, Cleveland
- Fort Hill Cemetery
Worth St, Cleveland
- Blue Springs Recreation Park
Blue Springs Rd, Cleveland
- Former Female Masonic Institute
633 Ocoee St, Cleveland

Charleston Cumberland Presbyterian Church
Railroad Street, Charleston

This National Register-listed Greek Revival-style church served as a Confederate hospital in 1863. That November, troops of Company C of the 1st Tennessee Cavalry, CSA, whom largely came from neighboring McMinn and Monroe counties, helped to evacuate the town of Charleston. That unit then joined the 38th Tennessee Infantry, led by Col. John C. Carter, in occupying this river town.

Henegar House
428 Market St, Charleston
(private residence)

The difficult Civil War experiences of the Henegar family at this house near the Hiwassee River in downtown Charleston are related through documents and letters at the Tennessee State Library and Archives. The family suffered from occupation by both armies and the use of the house as a military headquarters, including an overnight visit from Gen. William T. Sherman. Bullet imprints are testimonies to a skirmish that took place when Gen. Joe Wheeler made a raid through this area. Years earlier during the Cherokee Removal, 1838-1839, the baracks of Fort Cass were located at the site of the house. Henegar House was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1976.

Craigmiles House – Cleveland Public Library History Branch and Archives
833 North Ocoee St, Cleveland
ClevelandLibrary.org

In 1866, business leader P. M. Craigmiles announced the beginning of post-Civil War recovery in Cleveland with the construction of this impressive Italianate-styled brick home. The home now houses the large regional and local history collection of the Cleveland Public Library. This collection contains significant records about the Civil War and Reconstruction years in Bradley County and other surrounding counties.

Fort Hill Cemetery
Worth Street, Cleveland

The Grand Army of the Republic (GAR), the major Federal veterans organization, erected one of their few monuments in the South at Fort Hill Cemetery's entrance in 1914. This monument is one of only three in Tennessee. Because of Fort Hill's commanding views overlooking downtown, the railroad and adjacent turnpikes, Federal troops occupied the cemetery during the Civil War. Fort Hill is also the site of the Isabelle Tucker Hardwick Monument, dedicated in 2009 by the United Daughters of the Confederacy to the 270 unknown Confederate soldiers buried here. Also here are the graves of such notable local citizens as Civil War diarist Myra Inman Carter, Colonel Spencer Boyd and Judge Levi Trewhitt, all of whom played significant roles in the county's Civil War and Reconstruction history.

Museum and Cultural Center at 5ive Points
200 Inman St E, Cleveland
MuseumCenter.org

The Museum Center hosts a Civil War Trails marker. The museum provides an opportunity to experience Southern Appalachian regional history dating from pre-Cherokee to today in a permanent exhibit, "River of Time." The Museum Gallery Store features high-end, hand-crafted items from regional artists.

Monuments on Ocoee
800 North Ocoee St, Cleveland

Located where Lee Highway splits at the north entrance to downtown Cleveland, this Civil War memorial was funded by the Jefferson Davis Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy (UDC) in 1910. Another monument in the split memorializes three young men killed in a train accident in 1889. The obelisk remembers locals John M. Hardwick, Will G. Steed, and Will F. Marshall.

ATTRACTIONS

Let's discovere, y'all!

Faith is tightly woven into the fabric of this community. Our deep spiritual roots include being the home of the "Red Back" Church Hymnal.

The Red Back
America's Best Loved Hymnal

Museum Center at 5ive Points

200 East Inman St • 423-339-5745
MuseumCenter.org

The Church Hymnal, famously referred to as the "Red Back," has been a mainstay in the Southern Gospel music tradition for more than six decades. The Museum Center at 5ive Points honored the Red Back's heritage with a permanent exhibit entitled The "Red Back." America's Best-Loved Hymnal. The exhibit, geared for learners of all ages, explores the local history of the Red Back from its development and first printing in Cleveland, to its widespread adoption and continuing influence on Christian music. The museum and exhibit were recently selected as an "official location" on Tennessee Music Pathways. Several Red Back Hymnal Singings happen throughout the year. Check out our searchable calendar on VisitClevelandTN.com for scheduling details.

Church of God International Offices & Prayer Plaza

2490 Keith St • 423-472-3361
ChurchOfGod.org

Since 1904, Cleveland has been home to the International Offices of the Church of God, one of America's oldest continuing Pentecostal denominations. More than 6.5 million people claim Church of God membership around the world. A 24-acre campus at the corner of Keith and 25th streets includes three major office buildings and a Prayer Garden that is accessible to the city's Greenway. The Leadership and Communications Center contains a small conference center that is available for public use. Office hours are 8 am - 5 pm, Monday through Friday, with the Prayer Garden open 24/7.

Lee University

1120 N Ocoee St • 423-614-8000
LeeUniversity.edu

Lee University is a private, comprehensive university with over 5,000 students. Lee provides a liberal arts education in a Christ-centered environment, offering over 100 degree programs among its four colleges: Arts and Sciences, Music, Education and Religion. Its growing reputation for academic excellence can be seen in the high caliber faculty and students drawn to its campus.

Billy Graham Avenue

This street runs alongside Lee University's campus and meets Ocoee Street near the dormitory where the reverend Billy Graham lived while attending Bob Jones College, located where Lee University is today.

The city of Cleveland was granted permission by the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association to honor Graham, one of only three streets in the country named for the beloved evangelist.

RED CLAY STATE HISTORIC PARK

The beautiful setting of Red Clay State Historic Park includes walking trails, picnic areas, limestone overlook, a mysterious sapphire spring and nationally significant history. Red Clay was the last eastern council grounds for the the Cherokee Nation before their removal west in 1838. The interpretive center tells the story of the Cherokee people and structural replicas give a glimpse of what the area may have looked like more than 175 year ago. It is a certified site on the Trail of Tears National Historic Trail.

HISTORY

Cleveland
In 1836 Cleveland consisted of one small log cabin located in the heart of the Cherokee Nation, known as "Taylor's Place," home of Andrew Taylor and his Cherokee bride. Through the Ocoee Purchase Treaty, Bradley County was established. Bradley was chosen in honor of Col. Edward Bradley, fellow officer and friend of Andrew Jackson in the War of 1812. Cleveland was named in honor of Col. Benjamin Cleveland, Revolutionary War hero. With a population of 400, the city was incorporated Feb. 4, 1842.

Cleveland was a divided, pivotal location during the Civil War. Abraham Lincoln said "To take and hold the railroad at or east of Cleveland, Tennessee…is as fully as important as the taking and holding of Richmond." Cleveland was a stop on the stagecoach line; Billy Graham attended college in Cleveland; and Cleveland was instrumental in bringing the 1996 Olympic Games to the Ocoee River and was home to the Olympic Village.

Charleston
On the banks of the Hiwassee, Charleston was the first settlement in Bradley County. Once part of the Cherokee Nation, it was the last location of the Cherokee Agency. In 1838, the area was known as Ft. Cass, the military headquarters for the entire Indian Removal now known as the tragic Trail of Tears.

Charleston played a significant role in the Civil War as its strategic location near river and rail was an attractive post to both sides. Among the notable visitors, Gen. William T. Sherman stayed two nights at the Historic Henegar House. In 1959, Hollywood came to town as 20th Century Fox shot Wild River on the banks of the Hiwassee and locations in Cleveland and Birchwood.
